When the crop is sold the interest on the loan plus storage and handling fees are deducted, the loan is repaid, and the remainder is given to the farmer. The recent drought has been more extreme than in other years and this situation has forced the community to consider any and all approaches to bring water to the school and people living in the boma. Once the pipeline is constructed, a water meter will be installed in the boma and water bills will be paid to the District from revenues generated by the school, dormitory and within the community.
